History of Present Illness:

Patient comes into the emergency department today by ambulance with a chief complaint of pain in the right leg and foot. Patient suffered a serious injury with unknown consequences due to a single-car collision with a telephone pole. During admission, patient noted that the car collided with the pole on patient's side of car. Patient was passenger in car, not driver. Patient reported not to know what happened because of concentration on texting at time. Patient states short term memory loss from scene of accident to arrival on ER. Differential diagnosis of hysterical post-traumatic amnesia. Patient reports no prior illnesses or problems except numbness of the fingers at times when extremely active with the hands. Patient's leg and ankle appear swollen and broken. Numerous contusions about the head, chest, and right arm and hand. Injuries concentrated to the right side of the body. Patient is alert and cognizant, but appears impaired. Patient is asking normal questions regarding the location of "Blake" and "do my parents know where I am?"

Plan of Care:

Immediate work up of patient, monitor vital signs, conduct CT and MRI. Order x-ray of right leg and foot, as well as the right arm and hand to determine location and severity of any fractures/breaks.
