The United States’ entry into the global energy market as a steady producer has driven prices to historic lows. This new market dynamic is expected to continue with major consequences for all energy businesses. This program will take an in-depth look at various legal and policy issues related to the new world energy order.

Topics:

- Changes in Global Energy Trends and Associated Emerging Technologies
- Financing Energy Transactions in a Depressed Pricing Market
- Legal and Regulatory Environment
- Energy Exporting to Mexico
- Minding the Gap: Recent Developments in Energy Insurance and Contractual Indemnity Law
- Trans Pacific Partnership Agreement

Who Should Attend:

The program is open to everyone with an interest in the US energy market, and is especially appropriate for attorneys and business leaders operating in the energy sector.
